

HELEN OLOROSO

Helen Oloroso administers the Co-op and Internship Programs at McCormick, which advises and places approximately 350 undergraduate students with employers throughout the country and around the world. Students are employed in positions directly related to their majors in engineering and applied science, alternating quarters of full time work and school. Before joining Northwestern in 2001, she administered co-op programs at three other Chicago area institutions of higher education. She has a BS in political science from Loyola University and an MA in educational psychology from the University of Chicago.